Abstract of the Disclosure

A directory structure for a sparsely filled data container comprises a linked list, doubly linked list, skip list, or other non-fully populated list technique. One or more

5   hierarchical levels of such lists may be used for sparsely filled directories. The directory structure may be converted to a conventional look-up table directory by reconstructing the directory when the directory becomes populated to certain point.